DISSERTATION

“Honor Bound: The Military Culture of the Civil Guard and the Political Violence of the Second Spanish Republic, 1931-1936”

Committee Chair: Pamela Radcliff

Committee Members: Richard Biernacki, Frank Biess, Judith Hughes, Patrick Patterson

This dissertation concerns the role of militarized police forces in the collapse of Europe’s interwar democracies. It asserts that Spain’s gendarmerie, the Civil Guard, although charged with maintaining the public order, in fact increased the level of political violence during the Second Republic period by using violence as a way to defend its honor. Tracing the origins of the civil guards’ military culture in their social backgrounds, prior experiences, recruitment, and training, I find honor to be the code through which they were supposed to maintain cordial relations with the public. When faced with the mass mobilizations of the Second Republic, however, civil guards increasingly turned to violence as a way to create a climate of fear that would serve as a substitute for the respect they had failed to win from the citizenry.
